

Presenter's Resume:

Jeffrey Chan is currently a PhD candidate in the Design Theory and Method program in the Department of Architecture, College of Environmental Design, University of California, Berkeley. He is writing a dissertation on the role of improvisation in design and planning under the supervision of Professor Jean-Pierre Protzen. Other publications in design include, Chan, J.K., Beckman, S.L. & Lawrence, P.G. (2007). Workplace Design: A New Managerial Imperative, California Management Review, Winter 2007, Vol. 49, No. 2, pp. 6-22; and Chan J.K. (2005). Interdisciplinarity and Instruction: Beyond the Traditional Mastery of Professional Competence. In J. Giard & D. Pijawka (eds), Proceedings of the Fourth Conference, Doctoral Education in Design, held 25-27 June 2005 in Tempe, Arizona, USA, pp. 39-52. Jeffrey holds a Bachelor of Architecture degree from the Southern California Institute of Architecture (SCI-Arc), and a Master in Education degree in Mind, Brain and Education from Harvard University.